

Working at CHCC is a family affair for Nancy Maphis and twin sons

From the early days of Christian Health Care Center's existence, generations of family members have worked, lived or volunteered here. One of them is Nancy Maphis, long-term care admissions coordinator, who resides in Hawthorne with her twin sons. Troy Maphis is currently employed as information services application specialist. His brother, Kevin, was formerly employed in food and nutrition services.

"I want my sons to be strong individuals with morals and values who respect life and their elders and know right from wrong," said Ms. Maphis. "I believe our work experience at CHCC, caring for the elderly every day, has given all of us even greater respect and empathy for them." She added, "I also want my sons to be whatever they want to be, not what I think they should be. I want them to experience life and live each day to the fullest. I want them to see the beauty in life and in their own way, help to make the world a better place."

"I'd be nothing without my mom," said Kevin Maphis. "She is my rock, my guide and my greatest ally."

Twin brother Troy Maphis concurs. "She is, most assuredly, the most selfless, loving and influential person I have and will ever meet in my lifetime. She's always been there for anyone who needs her, regardless of any inconvenience it may cause her. She provides stability, caring and understanding to those who call upon her. I just want her to know that in 100 lifetimes, I could never possibly hope to return to her a fraction of the love and dedication she shows to everyone around her."
